To Circulate Petitions For Fire District

The New Lenox Civic club who have been advocating fire protection for the New Lenox Township, are preparing to circulate petitions for the purpose of creating a "New Lenox Fire Protection District." The petition addressed to the county judge will ask that the judge cause to be submitted to the legal voters of said district in accordance with the state statute, the question whether such district shall be organized as a fire protection district under and by virtue of the provisions of an act of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois. The plan is to create a fire district and to secure taxes for maintaining fire equipment, same as being done at Plainfield.

Blood Clot Causes Death of Young Tinley Man

Walter Wille, 23 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wille of Tinley Park, died early Sunday morning.

Last Thursday he became seriously ill when a blood clot formed in the lower part of the left leg, stopping the circulation of the blood. But since he had similar attacks before it was hoped that he could also survive this one. The leg, however, soon became gangrenous and the poison rapidly spread thruout his whole body. Early Sunday morning shortly after he had received the Lord's Supper, he peacefully passed away. He attained the age of 23 years, 11 months and 25 days.

His early departure is mourned by his parents, one brother Emil, three sisters, Betty, Mrs. Ethel Cowens, Mrs. Linde Ketelaar and many other relatives and friends.

He was born April 26, 1916 in Bremen township near Tinley Park. May 14, 1916 he was baptised and on February 28, 1937 he was received into communicant membership of the Trinity Lutheran church of Bachelors Grove, by the rite of confirmation.

Funeral services were held at the Trinity Lutheran church in Bachelors Grove Wednesday afternoon with Rev. Martin Frick officiating.

Orland 4-H Club Meets

The second meeting of the Orland Girls 4-H Club was held April 19 in the evening in the home of Alice Schilling. Nine members were present. The Ladies Guild of the Orland Park Methodist church entertained the South Suburban Group of the Methodist Women's Association in their church Tuesday for an all-day meeting. Over 250 women were in attendance.

The general theme of the meeting was: "Change Challenges Methodist Women."

The morning session opened at 9:45 with an organ prelude by Mrs. Adele Cooper of Orland Park. Mrs. E. Pohnke of Chicago Heights was the song leader. Mrs. Hilda Cox gave readings to the guests which was responded to by Mrs. E. Massey of Hazel Crest. Mrs. J. Swisher of Tinley Park gave the devotionals and the Rev. Mr. Null of Hazel Crest led in prayer. Mrs. Geo. Gee Jr., gave a vocal duet.

The address of the morning "Our Institutions" was given by Dr. Latshaw, district superintendent. A very fine dinner was served at noon by the Orland Park ladies to 250 guests.

The afternoon session opened at 1:30 with the president of the group Mrs. Ada Schellhase, again in charge. Mrs. James Oldshue, president of the general M. W. A. brought greetings; Miss Nina Grenier of Harvey sang two selections, "Trees", and "Rain."

Mrs. McFarland who was the originator of this Methodist Women's organization, spoke on the reorganization of the Methodist church since the uniting of the Methodist church North and South and how it is effecting the women's work and societies, etc. She explained that it is the plan for all who hold offices now, that they are to continue to do so until some future time when election of new officers will be held.

It is a large undertaking that of uniting people of different habits, traditions and ideas, into one unit, and the next four years will be more or less of experiment along the lines of working together as a whole.

The Rev. Mr. Jones of Harvey had charge of the consecration prayer and benediction and the singing by the assembly of the Dology brot to a close a most delightful and beneficial day and meeting.

THAT THIRD TERM

Washington Wouldn't Take It, But He Didn't Oppose the Idea

Tom Jefferson on the Other Hand Was Dead Set Against It; 'Old Hickory' Jackson a Single Six-Year Term; Hayes Indorsed It.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of three articles tracing the development in American history of the third term issue. What did Washington think about it? Jefferson? Andrew Jackson and others? The following article, especially pertinent during the present election year, is presented as a strictly impartial review of the third term subject, taking no stand for or against it.

II. PRECEDENTS AND VIEWS OF THE PRESIDENTS

IF YOU are opposed to the idea of any President seeking to have more than eight years in the White House, the chances are that you will cite the case of George Washington as your strongest argument.

"The father of our country declined to run for a third term. So why depart from the precedent which he established?" you will ask.

If, however, you believe that there is no real objection to having a Chief Executive serve more than two terms, you will also turn to the first President. You will point out that Washington retired after two terms not because he was opposed to a President serving more than eight years but because he was worn out with the labors in the service of the nation and looked forward to a peaceful old age at Mount Vernon.

Differed With Jefferson.

More than that you will quote this letter which Washington wrote to Lafayette on April 28, 1788:

"Though I cannot have time or room to sum up the arguments in this letter, there cannot, in my judgment, be the least danger that the President will by any practicable intrigue ever be able to continue himself one moment in office, much less perpetuate himself in it, but in the last stage of corrupt morals and practical depravity, and even then there is as much danger that any species of domination would prevail. Though when a people have become incapable of governing themselves and fit for a master, it is of little consequence from what quarter he comes. Under any extended view of this part of the subject I can see no propriety in precluding ourselves from the services of any man who in some great emergency shall be deemed universally most capable of serving the public."

The President who, even more than Washington, established the "no third term" tradition was Thomas Jefferson. Writing to Washington on May 2, 1788, in regard to the new Constitution, the "Sage of Monticello" expressed his dissatisfaction with "the perpetual re-eligibility of the President," because he feared that it would "make an office for life." So he said he hoped that "before there is danger of this change taking place in the office of President the good sense and free spirit of our countrymen will make the change necessary to prevent it."

Toward the close of his second term in office, when the legislatures of Vermont, New Jersey and Pennsylvania sent him resolutions asking him to be a candidate again, Jefferson replied to all of them with a letter which contained this paragraph:

"That I should lay down my charge at a proper period is as much a duty as to have borne it faithfully. If some termination to the services of the Chief Magistrate be not fixed by the Constitution, or supplied by practice, his office, nominally, four years, will in fact become for life, and history shows how easily that degenerates into an inheritance. Believing that a representative government responsible at short periods of election is that which produces the greatest sum of happiness to mankind, I feel it to do no act which shall essentially impair that principle, and I should unwillingly be the person who, disregarding the sound precedent set by an illustrious predecessor (Washington) should furnish the first example of prolongation beyond the second term of office."

During "Old Hickory" Jackson's first administration, he sent a message to congress in 1829 recommending that the electoral college be abolished, that the President be elected by direct vote and that he be limited to a single term of either four or six years. Five years later he sent another message to congress which contained this paragraph:

"All the reflection I have made upon the subject increases my conviction that the best interests of the country will be promoted by the adoption of some plan which will secure in all contingencies that important right of sovereignty to the direct control of the people. Could this be attained, and the terms of those officers be limited to a single period of either four or six years, I think our liberties would possess an additional safeguard."

Jackson's recommendation of a single six-year term for Presidents was echoed 40 years later when Rutherford B. Hayes in his inaugural address said, "In furtherance of the reform we seek, and in other important respects a change of great importance, I recommend an amendment to the Constitution prescribing a term of six years for the presidential office and forbidding a re-election."

In 1901 indiscreet friends of President McKinley began talking about his becoming a candidate again. Thereupon the President promptly scotched that talk by issuing a public statement in which he said:

"I regret that the suggestion of a third term has been made. I doubt whether I am called upon to give it notice, but there are now questions of the gravest importance before the administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of the thought of a third term. In view . . . of a long-settled conviction . . . I will not be a candidate for a third term . . ."

The candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt on the Bull Moose ticket in 1912 revived agitation over a third term. One of the planks in the platform, adopted by the Democrats at Baltimore, favored a single presidential term and urged the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution, making the President ineligible for re-election and pledging their candidate to this principle. A short time before the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson, the senate passed a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the President to a single six-year term. While this resolution was pending in the house, Mr. Wilson wrote a letter to A. Mitchell Palmer, a representative from Pennsylvania, as follows:

"The question is simply this: Shall our Presidents be free, so far as the law is concerned, to seek a second term of four years, or shall they be limited by constitutional amendment to a single term of four years or to a single term extended to six years?"

Admitted His Quandary.

"Four years is too long a term for a President who is not the true spokesman of the people, who is imposed upon and does not lead. It is too short for a President who is doing, or attempting a great work of reform, and who has not had time to finish it. To change the term to six years would be to increase the likelihood of its being too long without any assurance that it would, in happy cases, be long enough. A fixed constitutional limitation to a single term of office is highly arbitrary and unsatisfactory from every point of view."

Favored Two Terms.

"Put the present customary limitation of two terms into the Constitution, if you do not trust the people to take care of themselves, but make it two terms (not one, because four years is often too long), and give the President a chance to win the full service by proving himself fit for it. . . ."

"As things stand now the people might more likely be cheated than served by further limitations of the President's eligibility. His fighting power in their behalf would be immensely weakened. No one will fear a President except those whom he can make fear the elections."

"We singularly belie our own principles by seeking to determine by fixed constitutional provision what the people shall determine for themselves and are perfectly competent to determine for themselves. We cast a doubt upon the whole theory of popular government." (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Walled Kremlin Holds Secrets Of Red Regime

MOSCOW.—Soviet Russia is ruled from within a mysterious city in the heart of Moscow, the vast Kremlin whose inscrutable goings-on are hidden behind a 60-foot wall, armed guards and drawn curtains.

All the secrecy of the vanished Russian Orthodox church—and more—lies protected inside this palace which was once the heart of the nation's religion as well as her government.

Where Russia's monks and czars once walked there is now the guarded tread of Soviet commissars. But today, as before Communism, the "sacred city of the Kremlin" is still the focal point of all Russian eyes.

They used to say "Above Moscow is only the Kremlin and above the Kremlin is only Heaven." Today atheistic Russia ignores the last part.

Stalin Lives There.

No outsider knows within which of the Kremlin's innumerable buildings lives Josef Stalin, for he indeed is the visitor who finds his way inside this city's gates. Once there he will find the church of St. Constantine, Nicholas palace, Chudov monastery (now a military academy and barracks), a convent and courts of justice. Surmounting the wall are no less than 19 towers from which Soviet guards keep their eyes peeled for marauders lurking in Red Square below.

Just as the Kremlin was a stronghold for Czarists, so has it become the sacred city of Communism, a place where men of that creed gather from all parts of the world. In niches along its outer walls lie the ashes of "revolutionary heroes," including John Reed, the American journalist who turned Red. Also there is the "brotherhood grave" of 500 workers killed trying to storm the Kremlin during the revolution.

Lenin Buried in Red Square.

And out in Red square, but still within the shadow of this wall, stands the gaudy tomb of Lenin from which Stalin and other high Soviets customarily watch troop demonstrations and parades.

Night brings an added air of mystery to the Kremlin. At midnight its chimneys peel forth the "Internationale," Communism's song. But the notes come haltingly because the chimneys were originally intended to play "God Save the Czar" and have never been rebuilt. While the chimneys were still in pretty good shape they made a phonograph recording which is now broadcast nightly from Moscow.

In winter the blood-red flag is floodlighted atop the Kremlin, presenting a sharp and startling contrast with the snow-covered roofs. It was this symbol of Communism that the diplomats of Germany saw when they entered the Kremlin last autumn to sign that epochal treaty which sent Hitler to war against Poland and the allies.

Finland's diplomats saw the same emblem last December and again in March, when the Soviet behemoth closed its conquest against a smaller but braver neighbor.

Known to be located inside the Kremlin, therefore, is the most integral part of Viacheslav Molotov's foreign affairs commissariat, although the foreign office itself is opposite the Lubyanka prison. The politbureau of nine members meets in the Kremlin as does the council of people's commissars, or the Russian cabinet.

Stalin has always been present when noted foreign diplomats have called at the Kremlin, but he does not stay there all the time. He maintains several country homes, though nobody knows which of them he is visiting at any given time.

Perhaps it is the Kremlin's threatening atmosphere that makes visiting envoys capitulate to Russian demands, yet Stalin himself is always affable. It is known that after the Soviet-German pact was signed last autumn he remarked to Joachim von Ribbentrop, "Now let's drink a glass of our bad Soviet champagne."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Carter Field believes Governor Bricker of Ohio has a good chance for the Republican nomination for President, if the national convention should be deadlocked . . . Electric grid system shrouded in mystery.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—The Republican presidential contest has narrowed down to Thomas E. Dewey and Sen. Robert A. Taft, so far as the pre-convention battling is concerned. Of course anything may happen at Philadelphia. There could be a deadlock, for example, with neither Taft nor Dewey able to muster a majority, at the end of which the leaders would suddenly decide on the head of the ticket, or the convention might be hysterically stampeded to almost any conceivable candidate.

Incidentally that is one of the advantages of not taking part in the pre-convention battle. To be eliminated in advance, as for example in primaries, puts a handicap on a man's being selected after a deadlock. Not always, however. There was Warren G. Harding, who did miserably in the primaries but was named after the three leaders had worn themselves out.

John W. Bricker, governor of Ohio, seems to be in the prettiest position at the moment if there should be a deadlock. He is on the bench, at the moment, and must stay there until Taft wins or blows, by which time it may be too late.

But if there is a deadlock between Taft and Dewey, with just a few scattering votes which neither can corral to make a majority, the convention might turn to Bricker. That would be all right with most of the Republican leaders. It would be all right with most of the big contributors to G. O. P. war chests, especially those in downtown New York.

LITTLE BITTERNESS

Up to now there has been little if any bitterness in the Republican fight, however, and bitterness is almost an essential in creating a deadlock. Taft has said nothing about Dewey, so far as has come to light, calculated to make Dewey or his friends eager to prevent Taft's nomination at all costs. The same is true about Dewey's utterances.

On the whole the picture does not look too bright for Mr. Bricker. Something may be said or done, before the convention assembles, to mar the harmony prevailing between the contestants. But there is no sign of it yet. In fact there is no prospect of it even if there should be a knock down and drag out primary between Taft and Dewey in West Virginia, which looks more likely now than it did before Dewey scored so heavily in Wisconsin.

SHROUDED IN MYSTERY

Mystery continues to shroud the latest proposal for a huge electric grid system for the entire Northeast—from Boston to Chicago and Milwaukee, south to St. Louis and east to Baltimore—which the federal power commission group laid before private utility executives. But since there has been a leak, and obviously a leak from federal sources, practical engineers and utility men not in the original secret have studied what they have learned about it, and are far from enthusiastic.

This is a revision of the plan proposed last summer, which was to have cost $400,000,000 and included four government built and operated steam plants, the whole avowed purpose being to bolster the power supply of industrial America against the possibility of it being called on for war production.

Two things happened to that original proposal. One was that congress was horrified at the notion of appropriating $400,000,000. The economy wave, which has been slipping a bit since, was in the process of birth then, and the White House was giving no encouragement to any government branches figuring on a big boost in the budget.

ISSUE SIDETRACKED

The other was that war fever so obvious in some of the government's departments, notably the war department, was just about the most interesting thing in Washington at that time. So the national defense motive, while still present, scarcely seemed to justify an appropriation of $400,000,000.

So the group inside the government so strongly interested in the grid system has whittled down and revised the plan. It now calls for an expenditure of only $189,508,200, and this does not require an appropriation. It merely requires that the RFC loan the money to the utilities.

Now the curious phase of the whole business is that the private utilities do not want the grid system. Particularly they do not want any grid system to be imposed by the government. So if it is to come it will have to be forced on them, and forced under the guise of national defense.

Sunshine May Be Harmful to Lung Disorder

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

IT MUST come as a shock to many to be told that the rays of the sun may not only not be of help to everyone but can be actually harmful to some individuals. And if there is one disease where we have thought the rays of the sun were helpful, it is in tuberculosis.

Dr. B. Hudson, London, in Tubercle, states that the sun is a powerful means of treating certain disorders, especially beneficial in cases of surgical tuberculosis and certain other chronic surgical conditions that are not tuberculous, but "patients with tuberculosis of the lungs should never be allowed to take sun baths, as they are definitely dangerous."

Sun bathing, however, may be used when of the surgical type—knee, hip—where the process is slow and just in the one place; it is also useful in chronic pleurisy when the process is quite slow. Unsupervised sun bathing can certainly light up (make it start again) an unsuspected tuberculous spot on the lung.

When tuberculosis is of the scattered type—different spots in the lung—and especially if the patient has "feverish" attacks, exposure to the sun should be strictly avoided, as it is likely to spread the condition.

However, even in tuberculosis of the lungs, when a patient whose progress is slow in becoming cured, sun bathing may be tried, as it may give a little stimulus or increased action which, by stirring up the body's defenses, may bring about an earlier cure.

Now the above information does not mean that the sun is not helpful, because as a matter of fact, we do not get enough of it. The sun builds up the blood by increasing the amount of iron in it, stirs up and removes congestion everywhere in the body, prevents "rickets" in children, and raises the morale and well being of all of us.

Dizziness May Be Result of Anxiety

A PATIENT told his physician that he had a feeling that he was going to fall, that he would be unable to walk another block. The physician tested his eyes and his hearing, and, finding them normal, advised the patient to walk to the physician's office on his way home each evening for one week. As the patient did not fall for the entire week, the physician pointed out that it was worry or anxiety that was causing the dizzy or falling sensation. The patient admitted that he was treasurer and vice president of his organization and that the falling off in business was keeping him awake at nights.

This dizziness, falling sensation, feeling as if walking on air, is not uncommon in those who are anxious or worried.

May Arise From Double Vision.

Dr. W. Russell Brain of London, in the British Medical Journal, in speaking of ocular or eye vertigo or dizziness says:

"Dizziness may arise from double vision due to paralysis of certain eye muscles or from inability to adapt the eye to an unusual environment such as a rapidly moving train or on looking down from a height."

Aural or ear vertigo is very common and due to a number of ear conditions, infected teeth, tonsils, and sinuses, to a disturbance of the balancing canals, and to too much fluid or water in the tissues. When ear or aural dizziness persists, Dr. Brain recommends:

- (a) Removal of all infection in teeth, tonsils, sinuses or elsewhere.
- (b) Cutting down on the amount of liquids to 1½ pints daily.
- (c) Phenobarbital, ½ grain two or three times daily.
- (d) Lumbar puncture which means taking some of the fluid from the spinal canal and brain.

If none of these help, then dividing the nerve supplying the ear may be necessary to rid the patient of this distressing symptom—dizziness.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is there a diet treatment for rheumatism?

A.—The diet is only a part of the treatment for rheumatism. Any infection should be removed, and heat in some form used. The diet treatment is to cut down on starch foods—bread, potatoes, sugar and pastries. Increase fruits and leafy vegetables.

Q.—Is sighing a sign of heart disease?

A.—No.

The Rescue of an Old Wicker Chair

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS chair, now so smart in its sateen cover, button tufting and moss fringe trimming, barely escaped the trash burner. It had been such a comfortable chair that everyone hated to see it go. Sis said it was out-of-date and positively untidy. Someone suggested it might be covered. Mother said that wouldn't be a bad idea if it could be padded first! That gave Sis a brain wave. Why not tuft it? By pushing a long darn needle back and forth through the cover, padding and openings in the wicker? She had been wanting a tufted chair, so work began at once.

The sagging arm rest, magazine holder and frayed-out wicker around the legs were removed. The chair was padded and covered, as shown, and a new seat cushion was added. The tufting was done by sewing through tightly with heavy carpet thread; adding a button on each side of the stitch.

NOTE: Detailed directions for changing an old iron bed into the latest style are given in Mrs. Spears' Book No. 3; also how to make "The Rug That Grew Up With the Family." CHAPTER XI

Moses Lafayette O'Leary sat on a box in front of Norwood's tent, less sober than he looked, and looking not so sober as he should be. Facing him sat Sergeant Stoddart, weary from a day's work surveying the river.

Norwood dismounted near the horse-line, issued sharply detailed orders about the care of his horse and strode toward the tent:

"I will send for you when I want you, Stoddart. Come here, O'Leary." Norwood's servant removed his riding boots and produced whiskey and soda. Norwood drank. O'Leary watched him drink. Norwood lighted a cigarette, smoked half of it, and then spoke to O'Leary:

"Now then. Sit down on that box and begin. Omit the introduction. Tell the news."

"T's bad, not good, news," said O'Leary. "Might have got some good news if I'd had more money. Good news comes expensive oftener than not. What I'm tellin' you now, I'd tell to Father Manoel, on bended knees, and none but him and Saint Antonio to hear me. So get it first time. If I have to say it twice over, I might get muddled. I'm drunk, on account of having had to drink cheap liquor. Seeing it was your responsibility, and none o' mine, me being under your orders, I went gambling. Cock-fights. I lost a little money to a man who don't know cock-fighting from puss-in-the-corner. But he's runner for the layers of odds who'd bet you you don't know your own name. And they'd make money doing it. But there weren't much news there."

"Never mind the details of your bet. Tell your story."

"I betted five rupees. The insiders are offering five to one that the Maharajah won't live the week out. I betted he will."

"Why?"

"If me and you weren't on the job, I'd hedge. It was a woman told me why the odds are five to one he'll die within a week. She was as drunk as a Bombay crow, and she told me who's taking the five to one, same as I did, only for a different reason. I asked her, and she laughed like a hyena."

"Never mind what she did. What did she tell you?"

"She didn't tell me nothin'. She asked questions. If the Maharajah should die, who would come to the throne? Who owes a lakh of rupees and has promised to pay when he comes to the throne? Whose creditors have threatened to appeal to the British Resident? Whose aunt, being angry with him, this very day refused him money with which to pay off his creditors?"

"That sounds like palace gossip," said Norwood.

"I could tell you more than that, that's happened in the palace," said O'Leary. "They're betting even money that the Maharajah will be dead by midnight tonight."

Norwood threw his cigarette away.

"Go on with your story."

"It's a string o' questions, not a story. When they tell you a thing in plain words, 'tain't true—ever. Here's a question: if the heir to a throne should owe you money, and you'd get paid if he comes to the throne along o' someone dying; and the odds was five to one that the someone would die within a week; wouldn't you bet heavy against his dying, so that if he didn't die, you'd get some money anyhow? That's what Rundhia's creditors are doing. If the Maharajah dies, and Rundhia comes to the throne, they'll get paid. And if the Maharajah doesn't die, they'll win their bet. You get that?"

"What else did you hear?"

"O'Leary stepped outside the tent. 'You ain't goin' to like this one!'"

"Come back, you fool. Sit down. Now, tell it."

"Naming no names. Everybody says Rundhia stopped a wallop on the snout from her that kept the doctor busy for a half hour. That's all. I didn't hear nothing else whatever. Not enough money. I spent what I had like a paymaster-general. What's that you have in your hand?"

"Get me a dog and we'll find out. It's some of Mrs. Harding's food."

"There ain't no dog in camp, barring that cur of Stoddart's. Stoddart keeps him tied up, on account o' his having bit the cook. Stoddart don't favor the cook, he ain't that stupid. But if the cook gets hydrophobia, we'll all be biting one another and—"

"Bring the brute here."

"You mean the cook or Stoddart?"

"The dog."

Norwood sat smoking and frowning until O'Leary came towing the dog, at the end of a length of insulated wire. It was a mean-looking brute with pale blue eyes, a vagabond slink in its gait, and an insatiable void in its belly. The sight of any kind of food excited the animal. He pricked his ears. Norwood tossed him the piece of toast.

"Hold him," said Norwood.

The dog sat there seeming to expect Norwood to go on feeding him. Neither Norwood nor O'Leary spoke until the dog's attention wandered and he began to strain at the leash.

"That will do. Let him go."

The dog took six strides. Then he stopped, and the toast came forth like Jonah from the belly of the whale.

"Meaning?" asked O'Leary.

"Somebody wasn't intended to die," said Norwood. "Merely intended to feel too ill to interfere with someone. Can you sober up? Or shall I—"

"I'm sober. Forget your medicine chest! Once was enough o' that stuff! What do you want done? I'll do it!"

"Do you know Rundhia's Bengali doctor?"

"Sure."

"What's he doing?"

"So I needn't be too particular?"

"You will be on your absolutely best behavior."

"What you want is a miracle."

"Yes. And to produce one, if you must, you may admit that it was I who sent you to make enquiries. Get busy."

CHAPTER XII

Prince Rundhia returned from his interview with the Resident charged with that mysterious sensation that can lead a genius to startling victory. He had tasted success. He had made a British Resident squirm. Rundhia had crossed his Rubicon. He had started something. He felt like a genius, and he looked the part

"Did you mention my name in connection with this?"

now as he stepped out of his Rolls-Royce at the palace front door.

The Maharanee came fussing into Lynn's bedroom:

"Lynn darling, Rundhia wishes to see you. And I have told him I won't speak to him until you forgive him."

Lynn laughed: "All right. Come and hear me forgive him. It seems to me you're more afraid of Rundhia than I am. Read this first: it's a note from Auntie. Isn't it perfect? Auntie is one of those people who never use more than ten words in a telegram."

The Maharanee read the note aloud:

"Refuse the Maharanee's invitation, pack your things and come away. Deborah Harding."

"You will obey her?"

"No," Lynn answered. "I have obeyed her for the last time. May I say I have accepted your invitation?"

"Please, Lynn. Please accept it."

"Very well, let's keep Rundhia waiting, while I write her a note."

So Lynn wrote a note to her aunt, but she did not show it to the Maharanee.

Lynn and the Maharanee emerged through the big brass gate and became modern women. The seventy-year-old servant with the key preceded them and announced them, but they walked into Rundhia's den as if it were a New York apartment, which it rather resembled.

"Rundhia, that you should have dared to ask permission to speak to Miss Lynn Harding, makes me hope you are ashamed and that you wish very humbly to beg her pardon."

Rundhia was perfect. He didn't even make any contrite gestures. He looked straight at Lynn as if he and she hadn't even an excuse for a misunderstanding.

"I am not in the least ashamed," he answered. "A man who wouldn't have behaved as I did would have been an incongruous monstrosity without blood in his veins, or a heart, or a human emotion. My humility, such as it is, is solely due to my failure to make Lynn love me as I love her. I live in hope. I won't do anything like that again. Lynn, I admire your independent spirit just as much as I adore your charm. I propose to marry you, and I don't in the least regret having learned that you respect yourself."

"Good for you," Lynn answered. "Now Maharanee dear, you can talk to him again, can't you?"

"Yes," said the Maharanee, "if you are so magnanimous as to accept that speech for an apology. But I will not pay Rundhia's debts until I see how he behaves! I have heard plenty of Rundhia's promises."

Rundhia smiled at his aunt: "You dear old despot, you could make me promise anything!" he glanced at Lynn. "Have you heard from Norwood?"

"What about him?" she answered.

Rundhia's eyes watched hers with masked triumph.

"There is more than a rumor," he said. "There is proof. To the hilt. Norwood has accepted a bribe. Norwood's number is up."

The Maharanee gasped. She looked shocked, and Lynn noticed it. Lynn said nothing.

"Rundhia, what have you been doing?" asked the Maharanee.

"The Resident phoned, asking me to come and see him," Rundhia answered. "He has heard about Norwood carrying diamonds in his pocket."

Lynn laid down her cigarette. It didn't taste good. "Rundhia," she said, "who told the Resident?"

Rundhia shrugged his shoulders. "How should I know?"

"But I think you do know," said the Maharanee. "Rundhia," she repeated, "what have you been doing?"

"Norwood accepted a present of diamonds, from some agents of the temple authorities, to write a report in the priests' favor, in connection with the dispute about the boundary line and the question of who owns the land that the diamonds came from. There's your incorruptible British officer! Same old story! Good-by Norwood! They will hold a court martial behind closed doors, of course."

Lynn was remembering. The physical struggle with Rundhia in the treasure room was a fact through which slowly emerged something less than a fact—an impression. She remembered Rundhia's eyes when she told him about the packet of diamonds that she had seen fall from Norwood's pocket. She remembered her immediate regret at having mentioned Norwood and the diamonds, even though she did it to distract Rundhia's attention from herself. Regret enlarged itself now into a kind of cold, appalling horror.

"Rundhia," she asked almost hoarsely, "did you mention my name in connection with this?"

"Why should I?"

"Did you? Would you rather I should ask the Resident?"

"I had to tell him all I knew," Rundhia answered. "It was confidential—off the record. I forbade him to mention your name or mine."

"Have they arrested Captain Norwood?"

"Norwood is a crook, who has been found out. Why should you bother about him?"

The Maharanee interrupted: "Lynn dear, why are you so nervous? If Rundhia learned of something wrong, it was his duty—"

Rundhia interrupted his aunt: "Duty? Norwood insulted every single one of us, including you, Lynn. I heard him. He's a cad. Let him take the consequences."

Lynn returned to the main point: "Rundhia, you say that the Resident phoned you. But how did the Resident know? Wasn't it you who phoned the Resident? If you don't tell me, I intend to ask the Resident. There's a phone here. Shall I use it?"

"No one answered. Lynn tugged open the drawer of the writing table, pulled out paper, sat there and began to write. She laid the note she had addressed to Aunt Harding on the desk. In her haste, she splashed ink on the envelope. When she had finished her letter to Norwood, she noticed the blots on the letter to Aunt Harding. She threw Auntie's envelope into the waste-basket. She turned both letters face downward on the blotter while she searched for envelopes. There were none in the desk drawer. She asked Rundhia for envelopes. He found two. She inserted the letters, sealed up the envelopes and addressed them. Rundhia walked out of the room."

"I have sent him," said the Maharanee, "to find a reliable messenger, who will know how to find Captain Norwood if he is not at his camp."

Lynn gave both letters to the Maharanee.

"Darling," said the Maharanee, "Rundhia adores you so much that you could persuade him to do anything."

"My advice to you is to keep out of it," Rundhia answered. "They might make you give evidence. Do you wish to be dragged into a scandal? Norwood is guilty. Do you want to add to the poor devil's humiliation by appearing in court against him?"

"Rundhia, was it you who told the Resident about those diamonds in Captain Norwood's pocket?"

Rundhia didn't answer. Lynn got out of her chair and went and sat beside the phone. It was on a little table near the Maharanee. She raised the phone off the bracket, but let it click down again when Rundhia opened his lips.

"Since you insist," said Rundhia. "Yes, I told the Resident. However, he was already suspicious of Norwood. He was glad to get my information."

"And you told the Resident that your information came from me?"

"I had to. But as I have already told you, I forbade him to mention your name."

"Then I am in the position of having betrayed Captain Norwood?"

"Do you call it betrayal? He's a crook. He accepted a bribe. Not the first time either, I dare bet you."

Lynn spoke indignantly: "I don't believe Captain Norwood would accept a bribe from anyone. I haven't even the slightest suspicion of his being guilty, no matter what you, or the Resident, or anyone may think. I shouldn't have mentioned those diamonds to you. I did it inadvertently, when I felt I had to say something and it was the first thing that came to mind. You had no right to repeat what I said."

"You should first have consulted His Highness my husband," said the Maharanee. "Why didn't you?"

"Because he would have done nothing, as usual," Rundhia retorted.

Lynn's fingers returned to the telephone, but her eyes were on Rundhia. The threat of the telephone no longer worked. He nodded.

"Go ahead," he said. "Phone the Resident, if you care to. I wanted to keep you out of it, but do as you please."

Lynn stood up. "No," she answered. "I will write to Captain Norwood. I will ask him to come and see me. Perhaps my evidence would help him. At the very least, I can tell him how sorry I am."

"Lynn dear!" said the Maharanee.

But Lynn was resolute. She wouldn't listen to her. "May I have pen, ink and paper?"

No one answered. Lynn tugged open the drawer of the writing table, pulled out paper, sat there and began to write. She laid the note she had addressed to Aunt Harding on the desk. In her haste, she splashed ink on the envelope. When she had finished her letter to Norwood, she noticed the blots on the letter to Aunt Harding. She threw Auntie's envelope into the waste-basket. Lynn gave both letters to the Maharanee.

"Darling," said the Maharanee, "Rundhia adores you so much that you could persuade him to do anything."

Tiny Least Weasel Rated With Other Ferocious Animals

Ounce for ounce, with the possible exception of the shrews, the tiny least weasel is the most ferocious and bloodthirsty animal of the mammalian class. Only a fraction over six inches in length, and weighing on an average about one-third of a pound, it is distinguished from the other weasels by its extremely small size and almost total lack of the characteristic black tip to the tail. With its long flattened head, wide jaws, and peculiar looping gait when scenting a trail, it gives a definite impression of resemblance to a reptile. There is a tense readiness about it, comparable to a coiled spring held precariously in leash.

The least weasel is reddish-brown above, and white beneath. In common with other weasels, it possesses the ability to change to a white coat in winter, which must give it an enormous advantage over the mice and birds upon which it preys. In fact, it is only in the light of the almost unbelievable fertility of its victims that one can conceive of their continued existence, for all weasels are known to attack out of mere lust for killing. However, this is apparently part of Nature's scheme of checks and balances, and the conduct of weasels should not be judged by human moral standards. On the credit side are an enormous number of insects and rodent pests destroyed by this small predator, thus making it decidedly beneficial to man's interests.

The four North American subspecies of this highly successful little carnivore range from Alaska to Hudson bay, and southward to Montana, Minnesota, Indiana, and Pennsylvania; but in addition, the species has recently been shown to be represented by Old World races, making it circumpolar in range. Nevertheless, despite this wide radiation, it is rarely taken in traps and little is known of its habits. The nest, usually grass-lined, is in a hole in a bank. Four to six young are born in a litter.

Methuselah's Diet

Centenarians in Yugoslavia are convinced that Methuselah must have lived on cheese, for they already have a good start on the record set by the Biblical ancient. A recent census showed that over 2,000 Yugoslavs have passed the 100-year mark, and since the staple food of these people is sour milk and goat cheese, there seems to be some basis for their contention.

ISAIAH COMFORTS AN AFFLICTED PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 40:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46:1.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith the Lord," knowing as He alone can the great heart sob of sorrow, pain, and disappointment which arises to Him from His people everywhere. No tender of God's Word which omits His tender word of comfort is in any sense complete. No teacher or preacher who fails to bring that message to his people is declaring the full counsel of God. No more appropriate passage could be chosen for presenting that truth than Isaiah 40.

The prophet spoke to a people who were experiencing the bitter treatment of their enemies. They were facing the devastation of their country and the deportation of its people into captivity. In such a desperate day one might say that there could be no true word of comfort, but there was, and that word may well encourage us to look up in this our confusing day. The Comforter of Israel is ready to be our comforter.

I. The Source of Comfort (vv. 1-5).

"God is our refuge and strength" (Ps. 46:1). "Behold your God" (Isa. 40:9). "Comfort ye, saith your God" (v. 1). He is "the God of all comfort" (II Cor. 1:3). The astonishing thing is that mankind is so prone to seek comfort elsewhere, turning to God only when everything else fails rather than going to Him first of all.

His comfort is abiding, for it rests on a removal of the source of all pain and sorrow, namely sin. The day of Judah's comfort is to come when her "iniquity is pardoned" (v. 2). That is also the first step for us to take in seeking comfort, to repent and forsake our sin, seeking pardon in Christ.

The one who brings us God's comfort is Jesus Christ. Verses 3 to 5 speak of His coming. John the Baptist was the voice and it was Jesus for whom the way was to be prepared (see Luke 3:4-6). Jesus is the Lord Jehovah, God Himself, the Son of God, and the bringer of God's comfort to men's troubled hearts.

It is He who is revealed in this passage in all of His glory and grace.

II. The Need of Comfort (vv. 6-8).

Man thinks he is great, wise, powerful and able to take care of himself. William Henley expressed it in his "Invictus,"

"I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul."

But God says, "Man is as grass," and declares that when "the spirit of the Lord bloweth" on him he fades and withers. We know that God's witness is true. Boast as he will in the hour of prosperity and strength, man knows in his heart that when he faces the real issues of life he is utterly impotent, needy and undone. Gerald Massey spoke more truly than William Henley when he said,

"Surrounded by unnumbered foes Against my soul the battle goes!"

The man who has come to the end of himself and who realizes that there is neither in him nor in his fellow mortals the strength to meet life's struggles is ready for the ministry of God in Christ, forgiving, cleansing, strengthening and comforting. He has come to realize that "the grass withereth, the flower fadeeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever" (v. 8).

III. The Way of Comfort (vv. 9-11).

Good tidings were proclaimed even in that dark hour of Judah's history. We have good tidings for our day as well. Let us declare them from the mountaintops. Lift up your voice with strength and do not be afraid! "Behold your God!"

The prophet's holy enthusiasm had two excellent grounds. First, he tells us that God is strong. He "will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him." Here is comfort with assurance because God is strong. He is also loving and tender. His strong arm is used to gather the lambs to His bosom and to tenderly lead His sheep. Gentleness is the attribute not of weakness but of strength. God's strong men and women are His gentlemen and gentlewomen. They, like their Lord, are loving and kind, using their strength not to destroy or to impress others, but to help the weak, to bring comfort in the name of Christ.

Faith of the Future

The faith of the future, like the faith of the present and the faith of the past, will be in its essence simple. It will be faith in the goodness of things—faith that the world is governed for good.—Sir Francis Younghusband.

Encouragement of Home-talent Endeavors

By A. ETI ANEKOM

Home-talent endeavors of all kinds or types undoubtedly merit criticism.

The deserved criticism may be either constructive or of the opposite nature or "otherwise" type. One should never hesitate to give credit willingly to where it rightfully belongs. As to the amount of credit to be given is often governed according to the particular case, but otherwise an adequate amount should be given.

Sometimes when too much constructive criticism is given it becomes the destructive or "otherwise" type. This is due to the fact that it builds up the thoughts of the person to such an extent that he thinks he is perfect in the performing of the endeavors he has undertaken.

There is nothing more discouraging than to be somewhat wrongly criticized after one has done his very best to make a success of a home-talent endeavor. After all, we all know that the local participants are not, in most cases, of the professional class and this should be taken into consideration.

Grounds for much criticism are supplied by home-talent shows, although such sports as basketball, baseball, softball, and various others also offer remarkable grounds.

The "otherwise" type of criticism should be kept more or less confidential in order that the expectations of the criticized will be kept up and the critic's conscience kept clear.

GARDEN CLUB NEWS

I planted all my garden seeds Here in an ice, straight row; And then I settled down to wait, To watch my garden grow.

I planted them at ten o'clock, and now it's nearly three. Those must have been bar garden seeds

My brother gave to me. This verse was read at the April meeting of the Tinley Park Garden club, at the home of Mrs. Wm. Funk. The verse was taken from the May issue of The Better Homes & Gardens.

The study of the Rainbow was a lesson quite fascinating to all even though we have long since learned that there is no pot of gold at the end.

A contest was held of different specimens of shrubs and trees. Mrs. Nielson knows her trees, since she won the prize with Mrs. Rogers only one behind. Out of 15 varieties, Mrs. Nielson had seven right and Mrs. Rodgers 6.

Our guest for the day, Mrs. Jebson, sister-in-law to Mrs. Moss, was welcomed by the president. Also a very warm welcome home was extended to Mrs. Combs.

An Easter card was read from Mrs. Wyman.

We hear that Mrs. Keres is on the sick list and hope she will be able to be present at the next meeting. Which will be at the home of Mrs. Harry Uthe.

After the meeting refreshments were served at Mrs. Anderson's.

Home made Ice cream and Calla lily cookies.

Mrs. English, Press Chairman. PTA

The last monthly P.T.A. meeting of the school year will be held Friday, May 3, at 2 p.m. at the school in the P.T.A. room.

The school number will be given by the children of Mrs. Rauhoff's room.

Mrs. H. S. Bechtolt will speak on Child and Adolescent Psychology.

Installation of Officers for the new term will take place at this time.

The P.T.A. each year sponsors a free check-up of all the children ready to enter first grade next semester.

Now is the time to get them started out right. To be sure every thing is right before they start school.

If the Parents of these children will bring them to school May 9, they will be entitled to a free examination given by Dr. Bovick and Dr. Carmichael on Teeth, Eyes, Ears, Nose, Throat and Chest.

WBA News

The regular meeting of the W.B. A. was held in the P.T.A. room on Thursday, April 11 with Pres. Mildred Sayre in the chair. After our business meeting Hostess Mildred Sayre served refreshments and a very enjoyable time was had. We had a visitor from Port Huron, Mich., Mrs. Monn, Deputy of the Chicago district.

Mrs. Fred Willman and Mrs. Dennis attended an Officers meeting in the Republic Bldg., Headquarters for the Women's Benefit Assoc. last Thursday.

Blanket club winners were: Feb. meeting, Mrs. Keleher, Margaret Gunn and Mrs. A. N. O'Neil. First March meeting, Irene Bortsch, Lucille Erskine, 2nd meeting in March, Kathleen Bortsch, Mrs. Weslowski and Donald Wilkins. Next regular meeting will be Thursday, April 25. Buncos will be played.

SCHOOL NEWS—SOCIAL

The second Open House day of the school year was observed at the Tinley Park School, Thursday, April 25. The parents attended their children's classes and observed the work being carried on.

THE FOLKS IN OUR TOWN

I like the folks in our town, They're as nice as they can be. When I grow up I want to be Like the older folks

So folks will like me.

—Joyce Larson

SWINGING

Swing, swing, I like to swing! High in the tree tops Far from the green grass below. Swing, swing, I love to swing Far from the ground Up in the trees.... I love to swing!

—Alder Dean

MOON DREAMS

When I go to bed at night The moon shines in my window; Like a light, it keeps me awake. I like to lie awake

And dream about the moon. —Hilbert Manzke

MY DOG

I think my dog is the nicest beast! He never squabbles in the least. But then, he is so strange and true. I like a friends like that, don't you?

—Paul Baptist

KINDNESS

Kind hearts are like fertile gardens Where kind words and actions grow. And here and there most lavishly Their blossoms of kindness bestow The Magical lesson of kindness That our teachers thoroughly know.

—Gwendolyn Johnson

THE SHEPHERD

The Shepherd takes such good Good care of his sheep, Even when the moon is there And the stars peep; Big sheep, little sheep, All the same...

No wonder the sheep Are so tame. —Edith Poddig

The group which meets every Thursday for one-half hour in the fourth grade room for Music Appreciation under the direction of Miss Ferrar and Mrs. Buys, is hearing the story of Verdi's Opera, "Aida". Any child who wishes may attend. Part of the period is spent hearing recordings.

The Tinley Park Methodist Ladies Aid will meet Wednesday, May first at Hirsch's Chapel at 2 p. m. This meeting will be Mother's Day Celebration with Mrs. Marie Andres as hostess.

Mrs. Joe Andres was hostess to the Busy Bee Sewing Club Thursday afternoon.

The former pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. Mr. Hedler called in Tinley Park a week ago after having spent the winter in Florida. Mrs. Hedler was stricken seriously ill in March and was brought to Wesley Hospital in Chicago.

SHOW GREAT SUCCESS

The show "Hill Billy Wedding" which was sponsored by the Tinley Park Band Parents Association was a great success. The school auditorium was filled each of the two nights that the show was put on.

The Association wishes to take this opportunity to thank everyone who helped to make it such a success.

GRACE J. RAUCH, Publicity Chairman

Henry J. Bettenhausen has been on the sick list the past few days. The opening out door moving picture show of this season put on by the business men of Tinley will be held on the depot grounds on Saturday night May 11th. These shows will be put on every Saturday night during the summer.

A very large crowd attended the final rites for Mrs. Peter Wannemacher held in the Trinity Lutheran church in Bachelors Grove on Sunday afternoon.

The sacred concert program which was held in the Trinity Lutheran church Sunday night was exceptionally well attended and a very fine program was greatly enjoyed.

METHODIST CAMPAIGN

The men who are calling on the members and friends of Tinley Park Methodist Church are greatly pleased by the reception they have received both within and outside the church membership.

They say they are going "over the top" this week end. So far, Harry Brandau is "high man" in number of subscriptions obtained with his brother Arthur, Bill Schellhase and Cleve Hollstein crowding close for first honors.

Cleve Hollstein holds first honors for largest subscription and ties with Harry Brandau for most money subscribed.

Last week a "Victory Celebration" was announced for Friday April 26. Due to a conflict in dates, this has been changed to Monday April 29, at 7:30 p. m. IN THE NEW

The Niagara Girls Club gave a miscellaneous shower in Aunt Trudie's home last Thursday in honor of one of their members, Miss Loretta Hick and her approaching marriage with Mr. Herman Lauche.

As the guests fifteen in number, entered the home, they were met by a replica of a bride, life size, all dressed in bridal clothes, presiding over a table where each deposited her gift. They were later presented to the honored guest and were many and beautiful.

Games were played and refreshments, consisting of macaroni and nut salad, crackers, cake and coffee were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Eichernach of Palisade, Colorado, spent the week end with the former's boyhood friend, Mr. John Swisher and family. Mr. Eichernach is president of the Western Fruit Growers Association and they are on their way to Washington D. C. to lobby in the Association's interest.

The St. John's Women's Union held their meeting, Thursday, April 18, 1940. The meeting was called to order by the president Mrs. Julia Beagley. Scripture read by Mrs. Andrew Cappel.

The following ladies celebrated their birthdays: Mrs. Pauline Barenz, Mrs. Louise Bischoff, Mrs. Lydia Kohl, Mrs. Lucille Knudson, Mrs. Luella Marti, Mrs. Elizabeth Sievert. Table chairman was Mrs. Louise Bischoff, she had the tables prettily decorated with Jonquils and pussy-willows, and green crepe paper streamers. Mrs. Lydia Kohl program chairman rendered a very nice program, which caused much merriment for the ladies. About fifty or more ladies attended.

The Women's Union is giving a cash shower, sponsored by Mrs. Haeefe, Thursday, April 25.

A lovely luncheon will be served. Also a fine program is being planned. So please, ladies, come out and make this affair a success. The money is used for the welfare of the church.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Myrtle Stout entertained at her home at a miscellaneous shower in honor of her niece, Mrs. C. Raye Hogue of Joliet. Mrs. Hogue was the former Miss Harriet Ann Gougar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Gougar of New Lenox. Mr. and Mrs. Hogue were united in marriage March 17 at Henderson, Kentucky and are now residing at 456 Douglas street in Joliet.

Mrs. Hogue was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. Crash bunco was played at eight tables and Miss Margaret Shaw of Joliet was awarded the prize; in a bean contest, Mrs. Margaret Munson tied with the bride for first honors. Prizes were given to the bride. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of a pleasant afternoon.

Sheriff's Sale

By virtue of Execution issued out of the Clerk's office of the County Court of Will County and State of Illinois, and to me directed, whereby I am commanded to make the amount of a certain judgment recently obtained against William Noonan in favor of Harriet Burton Gould out of the lands, tenements, goods and chattels of the said William Noonan, I have levied on the following property to-wit:

The East one-half (E½) of the Northeast quarter (NE¼) of the Northeast quarter (NE¼) of Section twenty-three (23), also, Lot one (1) in the Subdivision of the North one-half (N½) of the Southeast quarter (SE¼) of the Northeast Quarter (NE¼) of Section Twenty-three, said lot one (1) also described as Lot one (1) containing five (5) acres in the Northeast one-fourth (NE¼) of said Section twenty-three (23), all of the above described property located in Township thirty-four (34) North, Range Nine (9); East of the third principal Meridian in Will County, Illinois, and all containing twenty-five (25) acres more or less.

Therefore, according to said command, I shall expose for sale at Public Auction, all the right, title and interest in the above named William Noonan in and to the above described property, on Friday, the seventeenth day of May, 1940, at 10 o'clock A. M. Central Standard Time, inside the West main door of the Court House at Joliet in the County of Will and State of Illinois.

Dated at Joliet this twenty-fourth day of April, 1940.

Methodist Church Of Frankfort To Hold Dedication

Dedication services will be held in Frankfort Methodist church this coming Sunday at 9:30 a. m. The services will be of a special character and will be carried out by the Sunday School and church. The Junior Choir led by Mrs. Harry Tewes will render two numbers and the Senior Choir, led by Miss Lois Dunn, will sing a special anthem. The new Methodist hymnals which have just been published by our church will be dedicated. Each copy has been given as a memorial which will be inscribed by a beautiful artistic book-mark with the name of the donor. There will also be a consecration of a new communal table which has been given as a memorial by the Frank J. Kohlhausen family and an American Flag which will also be consecrated and which was given by Mrs. Blanche Mitchell.

There will also be special music by the choir and congregation. Everyone is most cordially invited to attend these services.

LOOK AT THE WORLD BY TELEPHONE

Abroad, the availability of telephone facilities is particularly limited in the case of the less densely populated areas. Thus, only 1-4 of the French people live in cities with more than 50,000 population, but over one half of all the telephones in France are to be found in these cities, with the result that the smaller cities and rural areas averaged only 2.31 telephones per 100 population. In Germany, the telephone development of communities with less than 50,000 people amounted to only 3.00 telephones per 100 population and in Great Britain to only 4.73. In the United States, however, there was 11.22 telephones for every 100 people living in these smaller communities. In fact, the average telephone development of the small towns and rural areas in the United States exceeds that found in such important foreign cities as Amsterdam, Budapest, Hamburg, Rome and Tokio.

Silver Jubilee

Plans are rapidly nearing completion for the observance in June of the "Silver Jubilee" of the Rocky Mountain National Park, the celebration to center in the picturesque village of Estes Park, located at the eastern entrance to this—the largest of the national summer vacation playgrounds. Secretary of the Interior Ickes and his staff from Washington, D. C., are expected to attend, according to information received by local Rock Island Railway representatives.

Much of the early Western episodes of this section will be reflected in this unique celebration. Such personages as Major Stephen H. Long, for whom the famous Long's Peak is named; Joel Estes, founder of Estes Park; the Earl of Dunraven, English sportsman and early rancher, who built the first hotel in Estes Park; Albert Bierstadt, noted artist of the Rockies; "Rocky Mountain Jim", frontiersman and others, are to be recalled in the "Jubilee" program. Representatives of the Arapaho and the Indian tribes will be included. Among the other features of the program will be summer ski meets and also mountain climbing, headed by Shep Husted who has climbed Long's Peak 938 times.

Rocky Mountain National Park, which includes within its boundaries 259,411 acres of the Front Range of the Rockies in north Central Colorado, northwest of Denver, was established by act of Congress in 1915, and is conceded to be the most accessible to tourists of any of the national parks.

In anticipation of a great influx of visitors to Colorado to attend the "Silver Jubilee" celebration, the Rock Island Railway has announced additional special train service to that section via Denver and Colorado Springs during June, August and September.

CONTRACTS FOR TEACHERS

DECLARED CONSTITUTIONAL

Three-year contracts for teachers were declared constitutional by the Illinois Supreme Court today. The state law, permitting three-year contracts for Illinois teachers after a probationary period of two years, had been previously declared unconstitutional by the Circuit court of Hamilton County. The case was carried to the Supreme Court of Illinois by the Illinois Education Association as a test of the constitutionality of the three-year contract law.

The Supreme Court decision states: "We find no limitation in Section 1 of Article 8, prohibiting the General Assembly from permitting the employment of school teachers for a term of three years."

The decision comes at a time when school boards in Illinois' 11,957 school districts are considering the employment of teachers. Under this decision teachers who have been previously employed for two years by a district may be given a contract for three years.

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Maue returned Sunday from a month's motor trip which took them to Cincinnati, Ohio where they spent several days with the latter's sister, Mrs. Owen Miller and daughter. From there they traveled down the east coast of Florida and enjoyed many days in St. Petersburg with Mr. and Mrs. George Cooper and family. They explored Mammoth Cave in Kentucky on their way back. All in all they report a very fine trip and are looking forward to another vacation in like manner.

TED SANDERS had come to this little mountain town in California for peace and atmosphere essential to the brain worker, and he lived alone to escape the distractions of womankind. For company he kept only an airedale dog, and by way of unhappy diversion, he cooked his own meals.

Flo Donegan lived in a cozy cottage next door, and her screened-in living room was directly opposite his study windows. For companionship she kept a cat. It was sickening to see the way she pampered the thing—letting it sleep on a cushion, and all that sort of thing.

That woman, Ted judged, must be the usual cat-loving old maid.

Terrence (the dog), and Pom-Pom (the cat), were not quiet and self-effacing neighbors; they found life monotonous without a daily scrap; and they did their best to relieve that monotony. During their encounters the air was punctured with barks and howls and caterwauls.

Not infrequently Ted and Flo became involved in the scimmages. With the first weapon ready at hand Flo would fly to the rescue of the beloved Pom-Pom, and in agonizing fury would demand of Ted that he "call off his brute." Ted, with equal energy, anathematized that "demon" of hers. Altogether the four of them failed to live in restful harmony.

How could a man concentrate under such conditions? Back into his study he would stamp, and try to settle down to the task upon which he was engaged. A look across to that screened room where she could be seen sitting sewing or reading peacefully revealed to him the shallowness of the feminine mind—and yet, confound it! She looked so deucedly comfortable—and so did the cat.

One day things came to a climax. An unusually vigorous and vociferous row had been staged by Terrence and Pom-Pom—and, in consequence, an equally vigorous word battle between the humans. Flo, in the course of her frantic lunges at the "big brute" tripped and fell. There was nothing else to do so Ted picked her up and carried her into her house. This, however, only aggravated matters, and the battle still raged. "See here, Miss Donegan, why in thunder do you make such a fool of yourself over a cat? Why don't you get rid of it? What are you going to do about it anyway, for this sort of bedlam can't continue?"

A quick glance around revealed to him a mighty pretty room, with books, books galore.

Flo, between breaths, had thought that he might even be interesting. This thought was immediately swallowed up in fury at his suggestion concerning her Pom-Pom. She fairly choked at the audacity of the man. "Oh! Oh! Do you mean kill my cat and let your beastly dog live—not if I—"

Suddenly they became conscious of cessation of hostilities without, and silence that could be felt. There stood the "big brute" on Pom-Pom's side of the lot, with an idiotic doggy grin spreading over his ugly mug, looking down upon his feline foe, who was contentedly rubbing herself against his legs, and purring her supreme satisfaction.

Flo and Ted took it all in at a glance, then their eyes met in mutual understanding of the situation. By George! but she was pretty when she smiled, with that lurking humor in her eyes! Intelligent, too! Anyone could see that.

Scraps? Yes! to relieve the intolerable boredom of a too civilized life. Had the humans been at all aware of animal psychology they might have known by the noisiness of the encounters, that the cause was not deep-rooted. Animals (including the human) when in earnest, fight grimly and silently to a finish. These scimmages were like the quarrels of children at play, that pass away with—in fact are part of—the game. At heart the friendship was secure.

A whiff from the kitchen broke the spell.

They dined together that night, while Terrence and Pom-Pom, at peace with the world and with each other, waited expectantly.

In fact, on many more evenings the four of them dined together, and there were long talks, not alone upon scientific subjects, but upon the more intimate personal interests of the former combatants, while, with stomachs well filled, the other two slept the sleep of perfect peace.

It is wonderful, the satisfying effect of a good meal, especially if the material meal be accompanied by its intellectual counterpart.

To say that Ted and Flo were happy ever after would be begging the subject, for such a state of perfect unchangeable felicity would cloy and tend to degeneracy. A good, healthy, occasional scrap helps to clear the atmosphere, and, like an electric storm, its effects are purifying.

But Ted and Flo lived to enjoy and respect each other's mental contributions to their general store of knowledge, and were perfectly satisfied with life as they found it.

Baby Heaven

By ILA LEWIS

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

"I HAVE just the place you are looking for!" confided the real estate agent. "No radio playing after eleven p. m., no saxophones, no dogs or musical students allowed—why, you couldn't ask for a quieter place than Bayberry Haven!"

"What was the name?" inquired my wife in a startled tone. "Oh—I see." She added. "For just a moment I thought you said 'Baby Heaven!'"

"Ha! ha!" laughed the agent, in what I thought at the time was a remarkably hollow tone. "Ha! ha! ha!"

And so we moved to Bayberry Haven. A little far out, but sunlight in every room, an outside entrance to every apartment, and a real grass lawn in the middle.

"Welcome to Baby Heaven!" cried the iceman gayly as my wife let him in at the front door the next morning.

And Baby Heaven it was.

As I ran for my train in the morning, I would leap over a toy automobile, broad jump over eight kiddie cars in a row, pole vault over a scooter bike and roll merrily down the sidewalk with two roller skates under one foot.

True, there was no radio playing after eleven at night. There were no dogs, there were no saxophones, there were no musical students. But there was no law against the infant above us, and the infant below us, and the infant to the right of us, and the infant to the left of us, taking regular turns all night to disrupt the peace and quiet for which I had come to Bayberry Haven.

Sometimes, when starting out in the morning, I would look about me at the beautiful sunshine and at the little porch of green lawn, and I would determine to ask some of the boys from the office out to dinner that night, so the poor city-bound oafs could see what a blade of grass looked like.

But ah, the kiddies! The kiddies! By dinner time, what with their abandoned dollies, and their lost caps, and their paper airplanes—you know, you fold up little pieces of paper and sail them all over the place and hear the janitor swear—well, what with them scattered knee deep all over our little green lawn space, I don't believe the boys from the office ever did get to see a blade of grass.

And the chalk marks on the walk! How my friend, Hobbsnotch, of the Evening Graphnews, used to pore over them! He was writing his book then—you know, "Sally in Our Back Alley"—and of course he wanted to get it suppressed in Boston. He needed the money. He has claimed ever since, with tears of gratitude in his eyes, that his success dates from the first time I asked him out to dinner and he read the words that the innocent little kiddies had chalked on my front steps.

One Saturday afternoon I went to the grocery store on an errand for my wife. I thought at first I was back on the East Side. But I soon realized that they were not push carts—they were baby buggies. A sea of baby buggies. I counted eighteen of them in one block. You can depend on the number, because I am a certified public accountant.

If you saw a young couple strolling down to the grocer's without a baby buggy, you just knew that they had one at home, with a nice-reliable - colored - girl-by-the-hour-that-loves-children wheeling it up and down the sidewalk.

Or if they didn't have any baby buggy at all, you knew that Santa Claus had them down on his list, and they would find one in a stocking on Christmas morning.

I should have known it would be like that. I should have known that every couple with one or two or three or four or five children—or even those young couples whose mamas are still squabbling over which one shall make the bassinet—I should have known that they would all move out here: It's so good for the children, you know.

And so the stork hovers over Bayberry Haven constantly. It's not his fault. It's the sunshine, and the fresh air. And you know how it is, in an epidemic of that sort you begin to get panic-stricken. Fear of contagion; force of example; power of suggestion; and all that sort of thing. You, too, may fall a victim!

A stork, after all, is only human. Or inhuman, whichever way you look at it. He might, some day, get mixed up in his chimneys. And, frankly speaking, being a man who is fond of his peace and quiet, I had rather be elsewhere when it happened.

So that is why, last week, we gave notice to the landlord that we were leaving Bayberry Haven on the first of the month.

But only this morning my wife whispered to me that it might be just as well to stay . . .

Refining Petroleum

Petroleum may now be refined economically, without the use of excessive heat, by using liquid propane as a precipitating agent for the heavier parts of the oil, it was disclosed at a recent American Chemical society meeting.

The annual all-school entertainment, featuring "Aunt Drusilla's Garden," an operetta, will be sponsored by the upper grade pupils of the New Lenox school, in the school Friday evening, April 26, at 8 p. m.

The cast of characters is: Aunt Drusilla, a prim spinster, Bette Stevens; Aunt Prudence, her sister, Veronica Muldoon; Nelda, their niece, Joanne Frick; Pat, the gardener, James Hayes; Bob, the leader of the gang, Bill Penn; Tad, member of the gang, Jack Sargeant; Tiny, a member of the circle, Jean Van Dyke; Jane, Mabel Mooney.

The gang, chums of Bob: Robert Legh Corp, Joe Gougar, Richard Cooper, Bob Buckler, Gerald Krohn, Jerry Conover, Wesley Brown, Paul Barnett, Wesley Collins, Richard Richard Swanson, Jack Sennings, Charles Salisbury, John Techman, Glenn Vally, Buell Cole, Norman Demask, Stewart Ayres and Harold Reinhardt. The Circle, playmates of Nelda: Lorene Johnson, Dorothy McCann, Dorothy Wanzer, Lois Myers, Margaret Rydberg, Lois Collins, Dolores Reinhardt, Betty Cagwin, Rosaline LaSanksa, Betty Hamilton, June Rinke, Beverly Luce, Gladys Slick, Evelyn Slick, Marilyn Cagwin, Peggy Luther, Shirley Quinn, Dorothy Rowe, Eloise Reinhardt, Ruth Ann Barnes, Mary Therese Sherwood, Ruby Hanuski, Margaret Cruise, Janet Mooney, Neome Strasberg, and Ruth Mattson.

The Story—Nelda, one of a large family living in poverty in a tenement, is taken into the home of her maiden aunts for charity's sake, but finds it very lonely in the little village. Her aunt Drusilla has antagonized the boys of the neighborhood by her aloofness and temper. Nelda is seldom allowed to go outside of the garden.

When the play opens as the children come trooping along from the last school session of the year, Nelda invites them into the garden. Aunt Drusilla appears; some mischief takes place and she drives them out in high temper. Later, a baseball is batted into a flower bed, and she keeps it as a lesson to the boys. They promise to get even, and while the family are all out, they steal into the garden for purposes of revenge. However, Bob notices a slight blaze in the kitchen, and all else is forgotten but the necessity of saving the house from burning down. The "gang" make an entrance through a window and put the fire out. The family returns; Aunt Drusilla is grateful to the boys and mollified. As a reward to the boys she accepts Nelda's suggestion of a Lawn Party a few days hence, to which all the children of the neighborhood are invited.

Act 2 features the Lawn Party. An entire reconciliation has taken place between Aunt Drusilla and the "gang" and a very happy time is spent. During the "ete" a letter arrives from a very rich uncle, Nelda, who has been in the West for many years, insuring comfort and prosperity henceforth for her widowed mother, herself and her brothers and sisters in the city.

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

Miss Lola Scheer was honored by the "Bachelor Button Club" April 16 in the home of Mrs. Albert Krusemark, Jr. They presented the bride-to-be with a gift to remember the club.

On April 18 she was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by her cousin, Mrs. Milton Holl of Joliet in the Sievert Tea Room, 17 North Center Street. Airplane bunco was played and awards were won by Mrs. Burnett Schram, Mrs. Arthur Heiland and Mrs. Elmer Batson. Duplicate prizes were given to the guest of honor. Refreshments were served at a table decorated with sweet peas and roses in shades of blue and pink.

On April 19th, Miss Scheer's cousin Dorothy Vollrath honored her in her home by giving another miscellaneous shower. The guests included friends and relatives of the bride-to-be. Aeroplane bunco was the means of entertainment. Decorations of spring flowers made the event very beautiful. Many gifts were received by the bride-to-be.

Miss Scheer will become the bride of Orville Schroeder April 27 at three o'clock in her home.

Mrs. Helen Reitz, aged 93 years, died on Saturday night in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Conrad in Peotone.

Mrs. Reitz was born in Heiligenmoschel, Bavaria, Germany in 1846. She came to the United States with her parents when she was one year old. The family settled on a farm near Frankfort where she and her husband John Reitz continued to live after their marriage in 1864. Since the death of her husband in 1907 she has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Conrad in Peotone.

Mrs. Reitz was famous for her beautiful needlework and many of her friends received tokens of such, which they will remember her by in years to come. She was very active church worker and the Ladies Aid of the St. Peter's Evang. and Reformed church of Frankfort have classed her always as a charter member of the society and know her as an honorary member of that society until the time of her death.

The funeral was held on Tuesday at 1:30 o'clock in the home of her daughter and from there to the Evangelical and Reformed church in Peotone with Rev. E. H. Plassman officiating. Burial took place in the Old Settlers Cemetery in Frankfort.

She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Frank Conrad of Peotone, six grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Emil Brockmann, aged 53, died in Green Garden on April 19 in his home. He had been in poor health for some time. Funeral services were held on Monday at 1:30 p. m. from his home to the St. Paul's Evang. and Reformed church in Monee with Rev. Herbert Bloesch officiating. Burial was made in St. Paul's cemetery.

He is survived by his wife Matilda, one daughter, Mrs. Violet Ohrt, one son, Orville, one sister, Mrs. Selma Carnes, two brothers Christ and George.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Scheer and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Batson attended the funeral of Mrs. Englehardt who is a cousin of Mrs. Scheer. Mrs. Englehardt lived in Chicago.

Annette Kohlhaugen is ill with the mumps.

Henry Eisenbrandt who spent about four months with his children because of ill health, returned to his home again for the summer.

The Woman's Club met in the home of Mrs. Walter Pfaff on April 18. A report was given by Mrs. George Andrew as to the garden project and Mrs. Frank Kohlhaugen made a report as to health. A program with Mrs. Fred Whitlark as chairman was given. Mrs. Frank Kohlhaugen sang a solo "Come Back to Erin". A reading "The Self You Have to Live With" was given by Mrs. Edward Vollrath. The public problems: "Youth" with B. "Allied Youth" was read by Mrs. Fred Kohlhaugen. "C. Bad Boys and Good Neighbors" by Mrs. Conrad Oetter. D. "Boston Patrol" by Mrs. Walter Pfaff. An open discussion as to Will County Courts and civic problems was held. Mrs. Fred Heusner gave a talk on the topic "Home Safety—Fire Protection".

The next meeting will take place on May 16 in the home of Mrs. Ida Lankenau with Mrs. George Andrew as program chairman.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Haake will be interested to know that they had the privilege of enjoying their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Saturday night in Chicago Heights. Mr. and Mrs. Haake lived in Frankfort for many years and are old friends to many Frankfort residents.

The Frankfort Firemen enjoyed a social evening Friday, April 19 in the new village hall. Pinochle was played and a mid-night luncheon was served.

Mrs. Anna Knater has purchased a lot in Peotone and a new home is being built there for her.

Mrs. Lee Folkers of Joliet and Mrs. Glenn Folkers left Sunday by automobile for Oklahoma to help their aunts to move to Frankfort in the near future.

Mrs. Herbert Gullickson will entertain the Amite Sewing Club in her home in Joliet April 30th.

Miss Emma Wilson was a medical patient in Billings Memorial hospital in Chicago for one day last week.

Mrs. Melvin Fink is the new clerk at the Clover Farm Store, taking the place of Betty Mark who in turn takes the place of Lola Scheer who will be married Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hansen of Joliet had the misfortune of losing their home with all of the furniture by fire last Saturday. They had resided on Richards street on Manhattan road. They were unable to save anything. The fire was caused by defective wiring it is thought. Mr. and Mrs. Hansen are both in their seventies and this loss is a great blow to them. They saw their home being destroyed by fire from the home of their daughter Mrs. John Hossbach. The couple have many relatives and friends here who earnestly feel very sorry for them. Mr. and Mrs. Hansen were residents of Frankfort for many years. They owned the farm on which their son William now lives.

The Frankfort 4H club met Saturday, April 20 in the home of Mrs. Keuch. The club re-organized with Mrs. George Eisenbrandt as the leader.

Frankfort will again enjoy this summer free moving pictures sponsored by the business men of Frankfort. The first show of this season will be given Saturday night, May 18.

The Martha Sewing Circle of the St. Peter's Evang. and Reformed church will meet May 2nd in the social room of the church. They will have an all day sewing party. Mrs. Lena Stellwagon and Mrs. Minnie Bruggemann will have charge of the serving.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church will hold their regular devotional and business meeting May 2nd in the social room of the church.

Mrs. Herman Konow of Lockport is spending some time in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Koerner.

Mrs. William Lankenau spent several days in the home of her son Otto and family in Joliet.

Mrs. William Hansen returned to her home from Billings Memorial hospital in Chicago Wednesday and her condition is slowly improving.

Mrs. Alfred Zechlin and son returned home from Silver Cross hospital the past week. Both are doing fine.

Let us not forget to set our time one hour ahead Saturday night as we will follow daylight saving time on April 28. The St. Peter's Evang. and Reformed church will follow this time this season with German services at 8:30 a. m., Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., and English service 10:30 a. m. Remember this means daylight saving time.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Elizabeth Goering, Correspondent

Mrs. Whittaker and daughter, Mrs. Amy Taylor and daughter of Indiana, spent Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McLean.

The Gardner family has moved out of the Falsen home and are now moving into the house where Fisher's formerly lived.

Mr. and Mrs. Bestsel of Chicago spent the week end at their home in the Lincoln Estates.

Mrs. Anderson and daughter spent Thursday in Chicago. Lisa Goering and Mrs. Wright spent Saturday afternoon in Chicago with Mrs. Wright's aunt.

A card party was held in the home of Mrs. Anderson one night the past week. The first prize, a bottle of perfume, was won by Mrs. Cochran.

Lisa Goering, accompanied Fern Williams, Loretta Moden and Rose Sluiter to high school Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Flora, Mrs. Florence Rountree, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Larson and sons all of Chicago visited in the Cochran home on Sunday evening.

The Mien family spent Sunday in their home in the Lincoln Estates.

Mrs. Anderson and daughter Myrtle, Mrs. McLean and children also Lois Moden attended the pot luck supper at the Methodist church Sunday evening.

Ben Kash and Jim Short visited the Lavender home Sunday. They are from California and New York. They enjoyed their visit very much.

Miss Beatrice Miller of Monee spent the week end with her brother Eugene and the Gardner family.

Mrs. Griswold has offered a liberal reward for the return of their dog Cubby or for information as to his whereabouts dead or alive. The dog was last seen when he was left out of the house Saturday evening at six o'clock, April 13th. The dog was half police and chow, bushy tail, light fur on hind legs, with a long thin scar on the abdomen.

A pot luck party was given for the Cochrans April 19th. It was given by Mrs. Charles Becker. The Cochrans received many lovely handkerchiefs as gifts. They will be moving to Chicago shortly.

School News

Rock Island Buys New Equipment

Trustees of the Rock Island railroad were authorized the past week by the U. S. District Court in Chicago, to purchase 150 open-top, 50 ton, hopper bottom cars and 60 covered, seventy-ton hopper cars, and a 1000 horsepower Diesel switching locomotive for immediate delivery.

The covered hopper cars are to be used in the transportation of cement. The Diesel switcher is to be used in the railroad's yards at Ft. Worth, Texas, where it has been under test.

It is proposed to purchase the 60 covered cars from the General American Transportation Corporation, and the 150 open-top cars from the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Company. The Diesel locomotive was built by the American Locomotive Company. The value of the proposed new cars and locomotive is given as $659,750.00.

Will Your Home Be Modern Tomorrow, Too?

Make Sure...

for tomorrow beckons
with new and improved electric home conveniences

Proper wiring is one of the most important features of a modern home, and yet it is often easily overlooked when plans for building, remodeling, or modernizing are discussed. With wiring for the most part out of sight behind walls and under floors, by far the greater percentage of homes of today have wiring facilities that are totally inadequate to meet the ever-increasing uses of electricity.

Each passing year sees an ever wider acceptance of such well-known electric aids as air-conditioning, modern lighting, refrigeration, and numerous small electric home appliances. If you are building, remodeling, or modernizing your home, make your plans include adequate wiring for both present and for future needs. Perhaps your present budget may not permit the inclusion of all the electric aids you hope to have some day, but by allowing in advance for such future contributions to better living, you can make substantial savings later. And you'll also find proper wiring saves from day to day by delivering all the electric power you pay for . . . wasting none. Look ahead . . . Plan ahead . . . Live ahead! Get in touch with your neighborhood Electric Wiring Contractor and let him show you how easy and economical it is to install adequate wiring in your home. Ask him for full particulars!

... AND ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP!

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopleman

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Welter had their infant son christened Sunday morning in St. Alphonsus church in Lemont. Miss Mildred Welter and Andrew Welter acted as sponsors. The name given was Nicholas Andrew.

Mr. and Mrs. Welter entertained at dinner. The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Welter, Mrs. Rose Welter of Lemont, Mildred and Margaret Welter of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. John Donahue, Mrs. Anna Welter and the immediate members of the family. The baby was the recipient of many lovely presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Reichermann of Chicago spent the week end with the latter's brother Hans Warnsholt and family.

The Royal Neighbors held their regular monthly meeting in the hall in Goodings Grove Thursday afternoon. During the business session, it was decided to conduct a public card and bunco party in the hall, May 14 at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Wm. Lister will be general chairman. The social hour was in charge of Mrs. Florence Homering and Mrs. Margaret Lister. Bunco was played and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Gertrude Hetherwick, Mrs. Madeline Welter, Mrs. Lister, Mrs. Marie Welter, Mrs. Stella Daley and Mrs. Florence Parker. The social hour at the regular May meeting will be in charge of Mrs. Florence Parker and Mrs. Corn Ingersoll.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Ott and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. George Ott motored to Harvey Sunday and visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hartman, Jr.

The condition of Mrs. Willard Rowley, who has been ill, is slightly improved. Mrs. C. G. Rowley has been ill the past week in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Marie Ott in Lockport.

A goodly number from this vicinity attended the baseball dance sponsored by the New Lenox Athletic Club at the Colonial Hall in New Lenox Friday night.

Mrs. Otto Gehart of Milwaukee, returned to her home Thursday after a few days visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Haley. Mrs. Haley who has been quite ill, is able to be around again.

The Ladies Missionary Society will meet Thursday in the home of Mrs. William Ross, with Mrs. John White assisting hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cutler are the proud parents of a daughter born in St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet.

Francis Ott, who has been ill is much improved, but still unable to attend school.

Mrs. Wallace Morrison was one of the co-hostesses to the Lockport Woman's Community club which met Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Robert Price at Lockport. The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Charles Jensen with Mrs. Clifford Mulbarger and Mrs. Fred Swindells as co-hostess.

The Girls 4-H club met Saturday afternoon in the home of Miss Katie Warnsholt. The meeting was called to order by Eleanor Kopleman, president of the Leisure Hour Project. Songs were sung after which the leaders explained the summer work, examined patterns and displayed many samples of materials, which could be used in club work. An election of officers for the summer work was held with the following results: president, Eleanor Cooper; vice-president, Katie Warnsholt; secretary, Rose Brankey; treasurer, Dorothy Mohr; recreation chairman, Virginia Gee. On Friday night, April 26th all the officers of the girl's club and the boys club attended an officers training school at the Mokena public school.

The girls then enjoyed several games, after which refreshments were served by Mrs. Warnsholt. The next meeting will be in the home of Eleanor Kopleman on Saturday afternoon, May 11. The girls are planning to have their material and patterns at this meeting.

Miss Emily Anderson and Raymond Carlson visited with friends in Chicago Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Ott were dinner guests Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Depra.

Mrs. Herman Konow, Sr., is visiting at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Koerner in Frankfort.

Kenneth Lauffer is suffering from influenza.

The spring tri-annual of the Will County Community Club League will be held at the Plainfield Methodist church, Tuesday, April 30. The program, which promises to be very good, will commence at 10:30 a. m. daylight saving time. Howard Norton of Joliet will talk on "Gardening for Best Results" in the forenoon and Mrs. Nina Malek, who has been a missionary in Africa some time ago, will talk on her work there, during the afternoon. There will also be musical numbers and a reading. Dinner will be served by the ladies of the Methodist church and following the dinner, while the guests are still seated at the table, several ladies from the Plainfield club will present bulbs and plants and each one will be asked to label their seeds and plants, also price them. This sale will be for the benefit of the flower department. All reservations for the dinner should be handed to the president, Miss Myra Reed by Saturday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Werner of Ridgewood were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Blodgett Sunday.

The Wayside Workers Circle of the Kings Daughters will meet on Thursday afternoon, May 2nd at the home of Mrs. Fred Blodgett, with Mrs. Helen Rowley as co-hostess.

Mrs. LaVerne Lauffer had the misfortune to fall and sprain her ankle recently. She is now visiting and recuperating at the home of her parents, in Des Moines, Iowa. LaVerne is staying with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lauffer this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Tatro of Joliet spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Sproat.

Mrs. Ray McCormick of Springfield, Ohio, spent the week end in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Kercheval.

John West, who has been ill, has resumed his duties at the Lockport postoffice.

ORLAND PARK

Dr. Stuart, aged 82 years, uncle of Mrs. John Loebe, died in Kalamazoo, Michigan Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. John Loebe, Stuart Loebe attended the funeral services.

Dr. Stuart was a noted surgeon. Mrs. Ella Loebe is visiting in Alagan, Michigan with her father Winslow Mahaffay who is 92 years old.

The bunco party and dance held by the PTA in the school auditorium was a big success, $27.50 being cleared.

The musical concert held in the Christ Lutheran church Monday evening drew a capacity attendance. The concert program was put on by Otto Baganz of Fond Du Lac, Wis., who is a renowned harpist. Assisting him were his son Reuben with the Cathedral Marimba and Miss Rheda Trapp with Vibraharp and Cathedral Symphony chimes. Together with Mrs. Baganz they constitute the Baganz Trio.

The sweet, uplifting and soul stirring music held the large audience enraptured. The color tone was strikingly beautiful.

Of more than passing interest is the instrument which Mr. Baganz owns and plays. It is said to be the last word in the harpist's art, both as to construction and tone. This harp has been termed the "Stradivarius of harps". It was produced especially for exhibition at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago and was shown there as the finest harp ever built. It is worthy of note also that this particular instrument was played for the first time in public by Mr. Baganz in a concert towards the close of the Chicago World's Fair.

ORLAND PARK WOMAN'S CLUB NEWS

The Orland Park Woman's Club held its regular monthly meeting in Croer Hall, April 11. At one o'clock a pot luck luncheon was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Harold Kinney, chairman, Mrs. George Gee, Sr., and Mrs. Ralph Town. At two o'clock the business meeting opened with Mrs. Chas. Maddox, president presiding in the chair.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Chas. Maddox; vice-president, Miss Adell Schmadeke; Mrs. Stuart M. Loebe, secretary; Mrs. Ella M. Loebe, treasurer.

A report by all District Chairmen was given and the Literature chairman, Mrs. Joseph Jaeger gave the Orland Park Woman's Club high honors in a report on the work accomplished in the library.

Following the business meeting, Mrs. Ralph Town, the program chairman introduced Mrs. J. K. Bears, District chairman of the club institute. Her talk was on "Club Ethics." Her talk was inspiring to the members.

She gave an interesting and instructive talk on the "Duties of the Officers" and pointed out how to create harmony in a club.

Lynn Hutchins in charge of the local McGinnis Slough bird refuge project gave an address setting forth what kinds of seed are being planted for the bird refuge for feed ing.

On Thursday, April 18 Mesdames Maddox, Leavitt, Lindquist and Kreuger were guests of the Palos Park Woman's Club.

The following have been appointed to attend the State Convention at the Sherman Hotel, May 16, 17, 18: Mrs. Chas. Maddox, delegate, Miss Adella Schmadeke, alternate, Mrs. W. J. Linquist and Mrs. Roxie Brown.

Mrs. Chas. Maddox, Mrs. H. Adelle Cooper and Miss Adella Schmadeke attended the 3rd district meeting on April 17 at the Franciscan Township High School in Calumet City.

CARD OF THANKS

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Oswald who spent the winter in California with their daughter Wauwata, returned home Monday morning. They report a wonderful sojourn in the Golden State.

The Brotherhood of St. John's church held their annual Father and Son banquet in the church parlors Tuesday night. The saxophone trio and the trio consisting of Walt Olson, Frank Hirsch, Jr., and Stokes Nebeker of the Mokena Civic Association provided the musical program.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler, daughters Adeline and Ada and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dealmore of Joliet visited in Blue Island Sunday with the former's cousin, George Heim and family.

John A. Martin who has been suffering with a mastoid for several weeks, went to the St. James hospital in Chicago Heights Wednesday morning to undergo an operation for the removal of the mastoid.

Herbert Bruns who has been laid up for six weeks as a result of a leg infection is able to be up for the first time since he underwent treatments in the St. James hospital. Mr. Bruns has been confined to bed until last week when he was able to be up on crutches.

Elmer Cooper, Mokena Republican precinct committeeman attended a meeting of the Republican County organization held in Joliet Monday night at which A. F. Schupp was re-elected chairman of the Will County Central committee.

The Mokena village board will meet in monthly session. Tuesday evening, May 7.

During the past week the Mokena State Bank has handled the sale of several properties in Mokena. First the old John Leiss place now occupied by the George Stermer family was sold to Hugo Neithammer who expects to do considerable remodeling on the place. The second property sold was the former Wm. Semmler residence on Neithammer ave. This was sold to Christal Koehler of Homer township last summer. This property was sold by Mr. Koehler to Harry Cooper who is to take possession very shortly. The third property sold is that owned by August Hauck and occupied by the Elmer Schoneck family. This property has been sold to Mr. Doyle now occupying the former Hirsch dwelling on Front street.

A number of Mokena families are facing quite a difficult problem as the properties they are now occupying have been sold and the new owners want to take possession of the same. There are no places for rent in Mokena at the present time and these families are in a quandary as to where to go.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Spiess and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Spiess of Chicago were guests last Sunday in the home of their uncle John Marti of the Plainfield Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stellwagen of Chicago have moved in with the former's mother, Mrs. John Stellwagon.

Mr. and Mrs. Steiner who have been living this winter in the former Mrs. Miller home on Second street, moved last Saturday to their home in Janesville, Wis.

Mrs. Emma Clark who has been in California for the past year returned to Mokena last week and is staying with Mrs. N. Scheiblich.

Miss Christine Schmidt who has been confined to bed for the past two weeks is slowly improving. We are glad to hear her voice again as telephone operator in our local office. Their home, which has been under quarantine for several weeks when Mr. Charles Schmidt was ill with scarlet fever, is released from the quarantine and the Schmidt family are now living again in their home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Stokes Nebeker entertained in their home last Saturday night. They were hosts to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Meyers, Mr. and Mrs. Needham, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hirsch Jr., Mrs. Bueschel and her son Andy. Cards were played and a lovely buffet lunch was served at midnight.

ATTENTION CUB SCOUT PARENTS

There will be a meeting of all parents May 1 at 8 o'clock in the Mokena School Auditorium. Mr. Boltz will be there and the Cub Pack will be organized. Don't forget Wednesday night May 1, at 8 o'clock.

NEBEKER PRESENTS REWARDS

Mr. C. S. Nebeker, chairman of the Scouts had the honor of presenting some of the rewards Monday night at the Boy Scouts Court of Honor held in Chicago Heights. Thursday night Mr. Nebeker went to Markham to the Court of Reviews.

The Mokena P. T. A. held their monthly meeting Tuesday. A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. McGuire for her work as chairman of the Carnival. The P. T. A. cleared over $80. The P. T. A. will sponsor a graduation party May 24 for the graduation classes; the Freshman class assisting the P. T. A. This is something new and we hope it will be an annual affair. Mrs. Capple entertained with a clever play given by the boys in her room.

The teachers were hostesses for the evening, the table was beautifully decorated with daffodils and silver console set. Individual ice cream cups were served, topped with frozen strawberries daintily little cookies accompanied the ice cream. Everyone enjoyed singing from our new song books and an orchid goes to Mrs. Gaddis for her fine work in decorating the covers.

The test showed me some of the responsibilities a bank has and the risks it takes every day of the year. It showed me some of the things a group of people have to do to start a bank and to keep it going. Good management is important and insurance, too. Every bank has several places where it can get money. It has to loan money out -- a larger interest than the amount of interest it pays on the savings deposits. It has to be able to pay the dividend (if there is any) to stockholders each year.

This test helped me to think of a logical answer to a simple everyday question, "What do you know about banking?"

MOKENA SCHOOL NOTES

Primary Room
We are happy to welcome three new pupils, Jimmy Gillette from New Lenox in the second grade, Shirley Jones from Oak Lawn in the third grade, and Earle Stellwagon in the first grade.

The attendance for the 8th period was 96.4 per cent, with 6 cases of tardiness.

Intermediate Room
The Brownie Pack under Mrs. Ferguson was recently organized with 16 members. Meetings are held every Wednesday from 3 to 3:30, and everyone seems greatly interested. So far everyone has passed his first test, that of memorizing the promise. At the last meeting Doris Spiess and Alura Mumford had charge of the games. Those in the troop include: Georgia Bennett, Barbara Bickley, Dolores Bruns, Charlotte Gee, Doris Homering, Norma Hostert, Alura Mumford, Eileen Nelson, Shirley Nelson, Lor-

Junior High School

Recently a contest was held in which junior high and high school students were asked to write an essay telling how a banking test given to them had been of benefit.

Judges of the essays, Miss Snure and Mrs. Ferguson, chose a paper composed by Barbara Gee for the award of one dollar. Honorable mention was given to Hobart Meyer a high school freshman. Below is the winning essay written by Barbara Gee:

Ways In Which The Banking Test Has Helped Me

"Before I had this test given to me, I took people's ability to write checks, to cash them, and to deposit money as something anyone could do. This test showed me some of the things that have to be done to be able to do this.

It helped me to see better that a bank is not only for one or two persons, but for the welfare of all the people in the community; that it is a place where people can deposit their money and know it's safe besides getting interest on it. They don't get interest on their money when they hide it in a sock or mattress or some other hiding place. When they hide it in such a place, they can never be sure it's safe from robberies; however, a bank's money is usually insured. People can borrow money from the bank, and they have a liberal time to pay it back.

The test showed me some of the responsibilities a bank has and the risks it takes every day of the year. It showed me some of the things a group of people have to do to start a bank and to keep it going. Good management is important and insurance, too. Every bank has several places where it can get money. It has to loan money out -- a larger interest than the amount of interest it pays on the savings deposits. It has to be able to pay the dividend (if there is any) to stockholders each year.

This test helped me to think of a logical answer to a simple everyday question, "What do you know about banking?"

Spring Menus

Planning meals can be fun, if you'll let your imagination and your conscience be your guides! Meal planning does require imagination and a bit of originality, too, if you don't want the responsibility of three meals a day to be a bore, and three meals a day without that touch of "something" different can be boring—to you as well as to your family! A meal may be properly and carefully "balanced" from the standpoint of proteins and carbohydrates and vitamins and minerals—and still be a drab and uninteresting affair.

That seems to be particularly true in spring, when appetites are likely to be jaded, and you seem to be running out of menu ideas. And that's exactly the time to try something different, a little trick to add newness and interest to soups; a tasty and unusual meat dish; and a salad or dessert that makes use of some of the refreshing spring vegetables and fruits.

Just for variety, for instance, when I want to serve hot soup as the first course of a meal, I combine equal parts of canned consommé and tomato juice, simmer the resulting mixture for about 5 minutes with a bay leaf for flavor, and serve it very hot with a spoonful of salted whipped cream sprinkled with chopped chives or green onion tops. And I serve green onions and crisp, succulent radishes in place of the relishes I've used all winter. I use rhubarb for sauce or for dessert, just as soon as the price comes down within reach of my budget; I shred young carrots, or cut them in thin slivers, and cook them with an equal amount of onion, sliced fine; drain them and season with salt, pepper and butter. Or I cook carrots and potatoes together and mash them just as I would for mashed potatoes, to serve with the rich brown gravy of a pot roast.

Here are three spring menus that I like.

Corned Beef Hash Patties.

1 16-ounce can corned beef hash
½ cup chili sauce
8 slices bacon (cut in halves)
Place can of corned beef hash in refrigerator and chill thoroughly. Open can at both ends. Push corned beef hash out of can, slicing it in ½-inch slices. Place slices in buttered baking pan. Place 2 teaspoons chili sauce on top of each slice and top with two half slices of bacon. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for 10 minutes or until corned beef hash slices are thoroughly heated and bacon is crisp.

Johnny Cake or Corn Bread.

(Makes 1 Johnny Cake)

(12 Corn Meal Muffins)
1½ cups yellow (or white) corn meal (uncooked)
¾ cup general purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 egg
1¼ cups sour milk
3 tablespoons butter (melted)
Mix and sift dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Combine beaten egg, sour milk and melted butter and add to dry mixture. Stir lightly and pour into greased shallow pan, muffin tins or corn stick pans. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 25 minutes.

Steak Roll.

(Serves 6)

1 slice round steak (½ inch thick)
2 tablespoons butter
½ lb. ham (ground)
¼ cup thin cream
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
Salt and pepper
¼ cup bread flour
1 cup canned tomatoes

Wipe steak with damp cloth. Melt butter in frying pan and brush over one side of steak. Mix together the ground ham, cream, and mustard, and spread over buttered side of steak. Roll like a jelly roll and secure with skewers or string. Sprinkle roll with salt and dredge with flour. Sauté in remaining butter until golden brown. Remove roll to skillet and heat to boiling. Pour this tomato mixture over the roll; cover with a lid and bake in a moderately hot oven (350 degrees) for 1½ to 1¾ hours, or until tender.

Chilled Rhubarb Dessert.

For an extra-special fruit dessert try the following: To one pound of rhubarb (cut in ½-inch pieces) add 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup orange juice and 1 tablespoon grated orange rind and cook in a double boiler 30 minutes or until tender. Serve cold.

Rhubarb Cream Tarts.

1 tablespoon butter
2 cups rhubarb (diced)
1¼ cups sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs (separated)
¼ cup thick sweet cream
½ teaspoon salt

Melt butter, add rhubarb, and 1 cup of the sugar. Cook slowly for about 10 minutes or until the rhubarb is soft. Combine remaining fourth-cup of sugar with the cornstarch, the well beaten egg yolks, cream and salt. Add to fruit mixture and cook until thick (about 3 minutes). Pour into bake tart shells. Top with meringue made from the 2 egg whites, beaten stiff, with 4 tablespoons sugar beaten in. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) until brown (about 18 minutes).

Chocolate Upside-Down Cake.

1½ cups cake flour
¾ cup granulated sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 sq. bitter chocolate (1 oz.)
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup broken nut meats

Topping.

2 tablespoons cocoa
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt

Sift and measure the flour. Then sift flour, ¾ cup granulated sugar, baking powder and salt together into a mixing bowl. Melt together the chocolate and butter; mix with the milk and vanilla. Stir into the dry ingredients. Add nuts and blend thoroughly. Pour into a well-greased deep layer-cake pan.

Topping.—Now mix together the cocoa, brown sugar and the ½ cup granulated sugar and salt. Spread this over the top of the cake batter. Over all pour the cup of boiling water and place in a moderate oven, (350 degrees) to bake 1 hour.

This is a rich chocolate cake with a chocolate sauce underneath. Turn it out for serving. It is best served slightly warm with whipped cream.

Porcupine Meat Balls.

(Serves 6)

1 pound beef (ground)
1½ cups rice (uncooked)
½ cup bacon (diced)
1 tablespoon onion (minced)
1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped)
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 No. 2 can tomatoes

Mix all ingredients thoroughly in order given. Form into small meat balls. Place in greased baking dish and cover with tomatoes. Cover baking dish. Bake approximately 1½ hours in a moderate oven (350 degrees).

WHAT'S A HOLD-UP MAN?

MC

By HENRY TRAVIS
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

STANLEY swung herself up the top rail of the fence that skirted the autumn-tinted woods, and accepted the red-cheeked apples that the boy standing before her offered from his pocket.

"You see, Jack," she said between bites, "it's this way. I want a puppy awfully. But Dad seems to think it'll be just one more thing to make trouble. You see the boys have their wire-haired, and the Persian cat has three new kittens, and Janie forgets to feed the fish, and we all have so much company—that doesn't mean you, Jack, for you're like one of the family and Dad doesn't mind—and mother says the maids get mad at having to feed dogs and fish and cats and kittens. So I don't know."

She finished the apple, aimed a core accurately at a stump across the country road, and reached for a banana protruding from Jack's convenient pocket.

"But you see, Stan, this pup's swell—a pomeranian. It'll never grow into a big, bothersome dog—it'll always be little and cute. It's got two white feet and two gray ones, and a white tip to its tail, and—"

"Well, I've got to have it. How much?"

Jack flushed, as he peeled a banana halfway down and took a generous bite. His voice was muffled as he answered, "Nothing. I've bought it. It's for your birthday present."

"Jack!" Stanley beamed. "Jack, you darling."

"Stan, will you marry me sometime?"

Stanley considered, her soft eyes looking admiringly at the tall, awkward seventeen-year-old boy before her.

"Why, I suppose so, Jack," she said. "If you give me the puppy. But we'll have to be cagy about it—the pup, I mean. Tell you what, I'll fix a place for it in the cellar. Dad never goes down there, and I'll tell Thomas about it so he won't be scared when he goes in to fix the furnace and things. Does it yap?"

"No," said Jack. "It's just a baby—six weeks old—and as good as gold. It didn't let out a peep last night—I kept it in my room in a box."

"Oh, Jack, you got it now! Can I have it today? Please? Then by my birthday it will know me and know it's mine? And I can break the news slowly to Dad?"

"O. K. by me," said Jack generously. "The sooner the better, if that's what the lady wants." He bowed low and swept his long arm in a circle meant to be courtly. To Stanley, it was. "How'll we manage?"

So they made their plans. Jack was to bring the pup, after dark, and hide him in the cellar. And then, when she could, Stanley was to go down and get acquainted with him and feed him.

"Just warm milk and biscuits, Stan, remember. It's a new idea in puppy raising. Nothing fancy. It makes 'em better."

"Pooh!" said Stan, airily. "I know all about that. We've had babies and puppies and kittens at our house ever since I can remember, and I know they've got to be brought up according to Hoyle."

At five-thirty o'clock that late autumn afternoon Stan, outwardly the same sixteen-year-old girl she usually was, sitting over her lessons in the big living room, was actually the heroine in a deep intrigue. She listened secretly to every unusual sound. When the handy-man—she told him to leave the cellar door unlocked—shook the furnace, when doors slammed or the wind sighed, Stanley thought of Jack, in the gathering dark, secretly and bravely bearing her birthday gift to its hiding place.

Suddenly she heard a distant murmur of sound, which grew nearer and louder momentarily. Funny that Jack should be making such a hullabaloo about it. Lucky Dad wasn't home yet. Darn—he was. The front door clicked shut and her father came into the room.

"Hello, darling," he said, as she greeted him with her customary hug and kiss. "How's everything today? Latin pretty tough? Want some help from the old man?"

"Oh, daddy, you're a dear. It's special—awful tough. Sure I want help."

Stanley chattered even more than usual, in an effort to drown the growing volume of sound at the back of the house, shouts and running. Funny, she thought. Jack was an idiot. No need to bring the whole neighborhood to help hide a pup for a girl.

There was a nearer sound. A racing motorcycle stopped before the house. The front doorbell rang sharply, again and again. Stanley's father, not waiting for the maid, opened the door. An excited state trooper stood outside the door.

"Beg pardon, Mr. White," he said, pushing his way into the hall. "But there's trouble. A hold-up man at the filling-station down the road, and the man made this way. Several people saw him—and they've trailed him to the back of the house. He's gone in the cellar, and locked the door. May I go down?"

"Of course," said Mr. White. His three sons and his small daughter, his wife, Janie, the maid and the cook, attracted by the voices in the hall, had joined the crowd there.

Several men crowded in behind the trooper.

"Right this way. Did you hear anything, girls?"

"Yes, sir," said the maid. "Running in the cellar."

"And the outside cellar door slamming shut, like," said the frightened cook.

"Oh, mercy be upon us; we'll all be murdered in our beds!"

The crowd, led by Mr. White and the trooper, made their way to the back of the house.

"Right this way, trooper," said Mr. White. "Here's the cellar stairs."

There were the cellar stairs—the door to them. But in front of it, arms outspread in an effort to block the way, stood a tragic young figure. Stanley, pale and determined, shouted:

"Stop! You can't go down!"

"Why, Stanley, you goose," said her father, putting his strong arm about her shoulder, "the trooper wants to go down there to hunt a man that's held up somebody down the road."

"Put down that gun," shouted Stanley excitedly. "It's not the holdup man. I know it isn't. Don't shoot him!"

A man burst in the back door. "Hurry up!" he said. "The cellar door's covered by a couple of fellows who were in the place when he held me up. But they can't wait forever. We seen him running up the road, and then we lost him in that dark bit of shrubbery next door, and then we seen him ahead, with a bundle in his arms, just like he had when he left the station, making it lickity-split around the side of your house. He's in the cellar."

The trooper went first. Stanley clung, sobbing and struggling, to her father, who followed with the others. "I won't shoot unless I have to," said the grim trooper. "But you women and children stand back out of the way."

The cellar, which they flooded with light, was silent. In a corner by the coal bin was a little pen, made of crates and boxes, with a cushion and a blanket neatly within its rough inclosure. Cautiously the trooper walked about, peering carefully into corners and behind boxes and barrels and partitions.

"Well," he said at last, "I guess he isn't here. Funny, though. These men are sure he came in."

Just then there was a tiny wail. A baby cry. "Hands up!" cried the trooper. "Jack!" cried Stanley.

From a big barrel emerged two hands, holding a soft black fluff of fur, from which peeked a solemn, round head. As the arms slowly rose, they revealed themselves as part of a much flustered and grim young man, carefully holding a pup.

The trooper wasn't very sympathetic when he heard Jack's story. "Sure I saw him," said Jack. "But he pointed a gun at me—and I ran. I was coming here anyway." He picked bits of splinters from his sweater—Stanley had the pup.

"The holdup man ran across the road to a car parked there, when he saw me running this way and drove off. I couldn't have stopped him anyway, even if he hadn't had the gun pointed at me. I had to bring Stan's birthday gift."

Rich Gold Strike Site

Becomes 'Ghost Town'

YELLOWKNIFE, NORTH WEST TERRITORY.—Under shimmering, brilliantly hued Northern Lights today lies a new "ghost town," shell of a bustling community that fought its way to a dominant position in Canadian mining.

This once-pulsating townsite 700 miles north of Edmonton, Alta., died in childhood because of the outbreak of war in Europe.

Lying in the shadow of the Arctic, Yellowknife began to forge ahead as early as 1935, but in the early days of 1938 hundreds of prospectors, mining engineers, lawyers, doctors and laborers flocked to the new area to seek their fortune in a strange, remote setting of rocky wasteland. Strikes, some rich, others less lucrative, were reported every few days.

The problem of transportation was solved with development of air travel. Droning plane motors resounded over the northern wilderness.

Yellowknife expanded, slowly but surely, until its population swelled to almost 1,000 inhabitants. Life was not drab in Yellowknife during this boom period.

In two months in 1939, this mining center developed from a motley assortment of weather-beaten log shacks and tents to a town of two hotels, five general stores and trading posts, nine restaurants, two bakeries, three airports, a moving picture theater, recreation hall and gymnasium, laundries, barber shops, and countless frame buildings.

But with the rumblings of war, gold mining stocks slumped. A tenseness was in the air. Companies hesitated to make large capital investments that would certainly prove worthless in event of a conflict involving Canada.

Eventually, numerous camps shut down. Jobs became scarce. Prospectors and their families packed up and started "outside" to seek other means of livelihood. Many big deals, for the sale of claims and promotions for large-scale development for partly proved properties, were suspended and, in many instances, broken off altogether.

For you to make

LET'S make some bright new panholders! NUMO hot iron transfer, Z9108, 15 cents, has just the motifs you've been wanting—pretty enough for any bride-to-be, and a gay tonic for your own winter-weary kitchen. The nine designs illustrated are all on this one pattern; note that these combine into distinct sets of three each.

A pastel waterlily flanked by two lily pads of green is the basis of one lovely set. Sunflower, morning glory and wild rose motifs make up the second set; the third set is a clever group consisting of two pup panholders which slip into a doghouse holder when not in use.

So if you're in need of inexpensive shower gifts, order this pattern, then get out your scrap bag and start to work. You could give no more practical nor appreciated gift than one of these attractive sets. And, of course, the several stampings of this NUMO transfer will enable you to make sets for yourself, too. O-Cedar it, lady!
Then you WON'T raise clouds of dust when YOU dust

Once upon a time the family joked about Mom or Sis chasing the dust around. Now, when they dust, they pick up the furry dusty stuff; it STAYS in the cloth. You add a dash of genuine O-Cedar Polish to dustcloth or mop, let it season a bit, and now your dustcloth picks up and keeps the dust. Ask for:

Cheerful News

Frock Is Tailored To Slenderize One

THE shirtwaister is always an excellent choice for those of you who want to look slimmer than the scales imply, and this one (1905-B) is designed to look especially slenderizing. The paneled skirt is slim-hipped and almost straight. The plain front of the bodice continues the line of the skirt panel, to give a lengthening effect. The shoulders are squared out, but not gathered, and the fullness under the shoulder yoke takes care of correct fit over the bust.

A smart double-collar effect finishes the deep v of the neckline—and you can wear the dress merely with its self collar, if you like. A classic style like this makes up nicely in such street materials as spun rayon or flat crepe, and in linen or chambray to wear around the house. It's one of those comfortable patterns that you'll repeat many times.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1905-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material; 1/2 yard contrasting. Send order to:
